The Protagonist's team then join JP's effort to defeat the Septentriones and prevent them from destroying the defense system designed by JP's to protect the few remaining Japanese cities that were not completely destroyed by that time, including Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and their neighboring prefectures.[11] While confronting the Septentriones and gathering allies, the Protagonist is frequently forewarned with videos of his companions' imminent deaths, and must find ways to prevent them in time, with the risk of losing them permanently if he fails.[12] Another hindrance comes in the figure of Ronaldo Kuriki, who leads a faction of rebel Summoners who oppose JP's methods.[13] The protagonist then meets an enigmatic figure introducing himself as "The Anguished One", who created of the Devil Summoning program to help them fight their fated deaths.[14] The Protagonist then learns that the Septentriones are actually trials sent by its leader Polaris who plans to destroy the mankind. [16] The Anguished One further reveals Polaris is a divine entity that controls the fate of multiple parallel worlds and that rather than deleting the world it can recreate it. [17] Once all Septentriones are defeated, Polaris will appear to mankind and listen to their will. [18] [19] Following the defeat of the sixth Septentrione, Mizar, and under the threat of impending doom after the Dragon Stream that protected the JP's-held cities was taken offline in order to defeat it, the Protagonist's companions are divided between three factions, one led by Yamato who dreams of using Polaris to create a meritocratic society, with each individual's worth based on his/her achievements; [20] one led by Ronaldo who envisions an egalitarian society with no distinctions between individuals; [21] and one envisioning Daichi's ideal of a third option with everyone cooperating for the sake of a brighter future. [22] The Protagonist must choose between supporting one of the factions or no faction at all convincing the Anguished One to help him destroy Polaris and ensure mankind would freely choose its own future without external interference, [23] or gathering all the factions to unite and restore the world. Wouldn't it be wonderful if people were more considerate? It is written by Nagako Sakaki, the artist for Devil Survivor 2's manga, and started serialization in Earth Star Entertainment's magazine Comic Earth Star in September 12, 2011. After defeating Canopus, the Protagonist must defeat the other factions in battle or convince them to join his cause. [24] In the meantime they fight the last Septentrione revealed as the Anguished One, Alcor.[25] After defeating the other branches, the protagonist's group fights Polaris and following their victory, the world changes depending on the path chosen.
